After each talk show took place in the exhibition space, the documentation was replayed on monitors placed on the stage. The edited talk shows were sold on VHS and DVD in a way similar to catalogues.

The shelf contained all of the remaining files from Kunstverein München's exhibition files. Due to regulations, it was not possible to take them out of the shelf to study.

MABE BETHÔNICO Exhibition view: "Telling Histories: An Archive and Three Case Studies with Contributions by Mabe Bethônico and Liam Gillick, 2003."

For "Telling Histories," Mabe Bethónico devised four "collections" from the Kunstverein München's archival material of catalogues, photographic documentation, posters, and press clippings, all of which was organized, catalogued, and displayed using Gillick's exhibition design.

North Korea is known for many things - but rarely is it contemplated for its aesthetics.

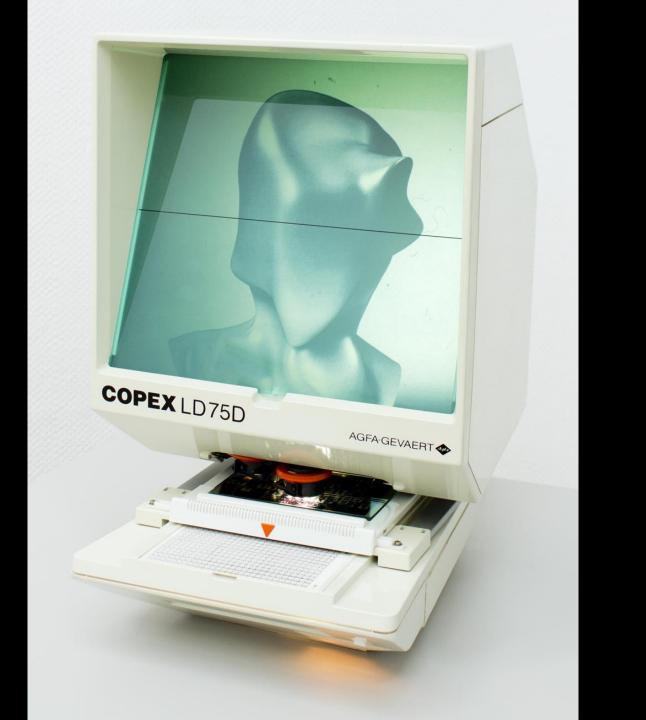

While some international artists have addressed the politics and human rights abuses of Kim Jong-un's regime, few have travelled to the country to experience their effect firsthand.
